MEMPHIS

MID-AMERICA'S MARKETPLACE!

■ Memphis is located in the heart of America, at a point where Tennessee joins its neighboring states of Arkansas and Mississippi. Home of more than one million people, it dominates a major 4-county, Tri-State metropolitan statistical area.

■ Mid-America shops in Memphis — the economic hub of a retail trading area that stretches from the bootheel of Missouri to the delta lands of Mississippi. Any accurate assessment of the Memphis market and its potential should include the 1.7 million residents of these 100+ neighboring nonmetropolitan counties.

■ Mid-America reads The Commercial Appeal — the largest metropolitan daily and Sunday newspaper serving the Memphis market. The Commercial Appeal has a 143-year history of success as an advertising medium. It delivers prime consumers who are your best prospects. Put it to work for you.

For demographics and target marketing information, contact our marketing department (901) 529-2270.

Nothing sells like the "paid for" medium

Newspapers possess many advantages over other media, not the least of which is the fact people pay to read the newspaper.
What are they buying? Information. World news and views, sports, business, community events . . . and advertising. That's right, advertising. It's not just something that hitchhikes on the news columns either. Readers regard advertising as a special kind of news . . . news about the marketplace, merchandising news, what's for sale, where and for how much.
It's an informative and looked-for feature of every newspaper.
Shouldn't you advertise in the medium that people want . . . and pay for everyday?

Put your money where the money is.

The latest '82 Simmons Survey puts the Detroit Free Press substantially ahead of the Detroit News as follows:

- $ More individuals in every income bracket from $10,000 or more a year, to $50,000 or more per year.
- $ More white collar and professional readers, both male and female.
- $ More college educated readers, and more college graduate readers.
- $ 318,000 more adult readers, daily and Sunday.

So, when you buy the Free Press, you're buying Michigan's buying power. And doesn't it make more sense to present your message to readers with money, than to just readers?

WE COUNT THE PEOPLE WHO COUNT—YOUR CUSTOMERS

AS A CORNERSTONE for its economic survey and forecasting services, Marketing Economics Institute maintains a comprehensive library of information on the composition and change of U.S. industrial and consumer markets. MEI's nationally recognized team of professional demographers and economists update the county, city and city part files of the library on a continuous basis.

The timeliness and accuracy of the data reflect the attention to detail at local market level made possible by MEI's exclusive system of monitoring activity in all U.S. counties, more than 2,250 cities and towns and in the 40,000 key industrial plants which annually account for 80% of value added by U.S. manufacturing. The resources of the library are made available to regular clients on a contract basis, but individual files may be purchased singly by business planners and research specialists with specific needs. Marketing Economics Institute will provide any of these county data files on IBM cards or magnetic tape or will aggregate the data to custom designed client market area format.

MARKETING ECONOMICS will be happy to discuss how its exclusive demand/supply approach to sales analysis and its wide range of statistical techniques can be used to measure and forecast sales for your product lines.

“Fact Is, The People With Money And Influence In Dallas Read The Morning News.”

Harry M. Stanley, Jr.
Senior Vice President
The Dallas Morning News

There's no question about it, the right people read The Dallas Morning News: People advertisers are most interested in reaching. For example, the most recent Scarborough and Simmons Reports confirm our lead in not one, but all of the key demographic areas of daily readership. We reach more people in the important 25 to 44 age group, more families with household incomes of $50,000+ and $35,000+, more professionals and more people with a college degree.

In fact, Scarborough shows one insertion in The Dallas Morning News will reach more adults with household income of $50,000 or more, than three insertions in the other Dallas newspaper.

Plus, both studies gave us the total readership lead daily in the ADI, SMSA and six-county Metro Area.

This leadership and growth is a reflection of our continued editorial commitment to excellence. Readers and advertisers alike know The Dallas Morning News works for them. Every day of the week. That's why nobody beats us in the morning.
